Written January 20, 1917, by William Lindsay:

'Tis many a year since first we met
 To visit Nannie O'Neil
 To celebrate her natal day
 And wish weh kind heart "weel"
 We met a hearty welcome
 In her cheerful, kindly way
 And many a happy time we've had
 With her the livelong day
 Many of those who used to come
 Have passed away and gone.

Their bodies sleeping in their graves
 'Til the resurrection morn
 Aunt Nannie, too, was called away
 When nearly eighty-seven
 And everyone of us feels sure
 That she is now in Heaven
 Because she kept the laws of God
 As nearly as she could
 And trusted everyone she met
 As all true Christians should.
 Those of her friends who yet remain
 Still hold the memory dear
 And gladly meet to celebrate
 Her Birthday every year.

At the peak of mining there were several Chinese cooks who hired in the area. "One Fan" was a beloved character who cooked at camps in the hills west of Midway. On one occasion young Nate Coleman came running to his father with an especially large piece of pie and exclaimed "Oh, Daddy, see what 'Parasol One' gave me."

Barber shops were operated at various times in Midway by Harry Bircumshaw, William Wheable, Thomas Hair, Mulholland Hair, Walter Van Wagoner and Bert Bonner.

John Mohlman and Mr. Kuhni repaired and made shoes.

Pool halls were operated by Erwin Alder, Walter Van Wagoner, Dow Epperman, Jack Derry and Keith Bronson.

When the railroads came to the area and transportation facilities improved many of the boarding houses closed.

The O'Neil hotel still stands on Midway's Main Street, used today as a private residence.

BOARDING HOUSES

Midway boarding houses in the early mining days were a boon to the men who worked away from their homes. The money these transient workers left in the community was also a welcome asset to townspeople.

One of the more popular boarding establishments was run by Mrs. Agnes O'Neil, affectionately called "Aunt Nanny O'Neil." She successfully managed the establishment for many years, and then when her health failed, a daughter, Mrs. Agnes Ritchie, took over the management.

Another well regulated and popular boarding house was operated by Mrs. Letty Bronson. Some boarding houses were also kept at the mine sites. There was one at White Pine Canyon and another at the Snake Creek Tunnel. The Old Steamboat Mine also had a boarding house.
